

After plotting the PCA for the control and the value with the variable in it, it can be seen that a lot of the variation surrounds the same areas. There are rarely any instances of any outliers in terms of variation. This shows that there's not much variation between the control and the value with the variable on it.